WASHINGTON (AP) — Nissan says it will recall nearly 135,000 Infiniti G35 sedans and coupes to address a problem that could lead to the air bag not deploying in a crash.

Nissan Motor Co. says the recall involves G35 Coupes from the 2005 to 2007 model years and G35 Sedans from the 2005 to 2006 model year.

The automaker says the air bag unit's wire harness under the front passenger seat could wear down and interrupt the air bag's signal. In a crash, the air bag may not deploy and could increase the risk of an injury.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says Nissan has not yet provided the agency with a plan to fix the vehicles or a timeline of when owners will be notified.
