

Government Sells Another Chunk Of GM Stock

The Associated Press

DETROIT (AP) — The U.S. government has sold another chunk of its stake in General Motors Co.

The Treasury Department says in its February report to Congress that it sold $489.9 million worth of GM common stock last month.

The report dated Monday says the government has recovered about $29.8 billion of its $49.5 billion bailout of the Detroit automaker. That means taxpayers are still $19.7 billion in the hole.

The Treasury says the price per share will be revealed later.

GM stock sold in a range of $26.19 to $29.36 in February. At the midpoint of the range, $27.78, the government would have sold roughly 17.6 million shares.

That means it still owns about 277 million shares. Those would have to sell for around $71 each for the government to break even, more than double the current trading price. GM shares closed Monday up 31 cents, or 1.1 percent, at $28.31.

In January, Treasury announced a plan to sell the shares by early 2014 and said that it hired JPMorgan Securities and Citigroup Global Markets to conduct the sale. The banks will get one cent for every share they sell, for a fee of up to $3 million.

When the government finally sells all of its shares, it will end a sad chapter in GM's history. The company nearly ran out of cash in 2008 and needed government money to survive a trip through bankruptcy reorganization. Since then, GM has posted 12 straight quarters of profits. Last year, the company bought 200 million of its shares from the government for $5.5 billion.

GM shares sold for $33 each when they began publicly trading again in November, 2010. The shares rose shortly after the sale but fell dramatically early last year as the U.S. economy slowed and Europe headed toward recession. A strengthening U.S. economy and the stock buyback have pushed the price higher.

Source URL (retrieved on 05/03/2015 - 6:21am):

<http://www.impomag.com/news/2013/03/government-sells-another-chunk-gm-stock>